

Keep Martin Beautiful Announces 2015 Environmental Stewardship Award Winners

During the busiest time of the year for nonprofit events and fundraisers, an enthusiastic and diverse gathering of Martin County's environmental leaders, activists and volunteers celebrated on Feb. 4 during Keep Martin Beautiful's (KMB) Environmental Stewardship Awards held at Piper's Landing Yacht & Country Club. More than 40 nominees were recognized for their efforts in community beautification and revitalization, litter and marine debris removal, energy of awards in a variety of categories including: youth groups, individuals, businesses, government agencies and nonprofit organizations.

Several special recognition awards were also presented. A surprised 12-year-old Veronica Dalton, received the River Advocate Award in recognition of an individual who has shown leadership in advocating for the protection and improvement of the St. Lucie River and Estuary and the Indian River Lagoon.

Janeen Mason was the recipient of Keep Martin Beautiful's new "Education in Action" award for bringing greater awareness about the plight of the Indian River Lagoon through the creation of the solidarity fish project. The traveling art display – comprised of thousands of small, colorfully painted wooden fish – mobilized thousands of people and generated nationwide coverage. The fish adorned the windows of Piper's Landings lounge area where the event's cocktail hour and silent auction took place.

"We are so proud of all the award winners," said KMB President Jim Dragseth. "Our community is full of incredible people from all walks of life who care enough to take environmental stewardship into their own hands and make Martin County an even better place to live."
